If you end up

Next, review permissions to share some information necessary to create the WHO guest account.	 The screenshot shows a Microsoft 'Review permissions' dialog. At the top, it says 'Microsoft' and 'testuser1who@free.fr'. The title is 'Review permissions'. Below that is the 'World Health Organization' logo and 'worldhealthorg.onmicrosoft.com'. A bold statement says 'This resource is not shared by Microsoft.' It then lists permissions: 'Sign you in' and 'Read your name, email address, and photo'. A paragraph explains that by accepting, the user allows the organization to access and process their data to create, control, and administer an account, and that the organization may log information about access. At the bottom are 'Cancel' and 'Accept' buttons.
You will now be redirected to WHO sign-in page. For security purposes, you will be asked to enter a code delivered via to your phone.	 The screenshot shows the 'World Health Organization' sign-in page. It says 'testuser1who@free.fr' and 'Enter code'. There is a checkbox for 'We texted your phone +XX XXX XXX X80. Please enter the code to sign in.' with the code '172648' entered in the field. There are links for 'Having trouble? sign in another way' and 'More information'. A 'Verify' button is at the bottom.
The activation of your WHO guest account is now complete! You will be redirected to our SharePoint website for delegates.	 The screenshot shows a SharePoint 'Site for Delegates' page. It has a navigation pane on the left with links like 'Home', 'Why visit', 'About document', 'About speaker', 'View all items in this list', 'Recent list', and 'Site'. The main content area has a large banner image of a conference hall with the text 'Welcome to the delegates site for the 73 session of the World Health Assembly'. Below the banner is a 'Statements' section with text about the opportunity to take the floor and a 'Interpretation' section with text about the official languages and interpretation services.
